Authority Writes On Civil Defence

I NCREASING international tension of recent months has brought much talk of civil defence planning from governmental authorities, but little action.

Starting on Page 4 today The Daily Colonist presents a timely series of articles on the subject by Dr. A. F. Mc-Gill of Victoria.

Dr. McGill is well qualified to write on civil defence. Dr. McGill is well qualified to write on civil defence.
In London, England, when bombing started, he was immediately called into Emergency Medical Services, the medical arm of the civil defence force. For three months he served in the heavily-bombed Croydon-Woolwich area and later in other parts of England.

Joining the Royal Army Medical Corps, he served in England and West Africa before going to India to serve in various Army general hospitals as a surgeon. During the last year and a half of the war he was surgeon on a hospital ship serving with combined operations forces off the coast of Burma.

In May of this year, Dr. McGill took a special course at the United States Armed Service Special Weapons Project at Washington, D.C. The course covered nuclear and radiation medicine.

When he was ten years old, a dynamite explosion robbed him of sight and his right hand—but not his courage.

Art, who is now 32, busies himself with the complex and exacting hobby of boat-building. In the basement of the sinall store and house where he and his mother live at 3556 Quadra Street, his latest and most ambitious project is nearing completion.

It is a 14-foot schooner-type sallboat with a five-foot beam and a tricky hull which sightly mylessional boat-buildings hesisiate to tackle.

I saked him how long he had been building boats.

him four or five hours to do it."

Art built two boats, strictly on his own, to find out whether he had learned his lessons properly. He started with a simple flatbottomed ten-foot rowbeat, then made an eight-foot yacht tender.

His new baby is a small sailing vessel with a schooner hull—a le more elaborate than the average schooner. Art said he had two reasons for building it. One was to see if could build a "real boat hull"—an exact municure of a larger

Art plans to test the boat at Scote, then sail it to Vancouver, with Mr. Clowes as a shipmate.

Art was born in Nottingham, England, and came to Canada at the age of 16 months. He and his parents lived for three years in Prince Rupert and two years in the Fraser Valley. When Art was seven they went to the Canboo, where they ranched for 21 years. Two years ago they sold out of the Cariboo and moved here.

U.S. Voters Split Their Preferences

T was Disraeli who said that a majority is the best repartee, and in politics no one has been able to get around that. By this standard, President Truman and the Democrats in the biennial election south of the border retained control of both Houses of Congress; although it is a bare majority in the Senate, and not too long a lead in the House of Representatives. In the off-season election without any Presidential contest the Republicans made material gains on the Administration, coralled the governorships, almost tied the Senate, and added considerable speaking and voting strength in the lower House. As a result the Administration and the Opposition are much closer to a balance than was the case in the previous Congress. In spite of the prophets, that should make for good government rather than the reverse

Canada's chief interest in our neighbor's general election rests in its possible effects upon foreign policy-not only in world affairs but also in the across-the-border dealings of every-day life. While some shifts in internal policy with Canadian repercussions may result from the test, the only marked effect on foreign policy is likely to appear in American relations with the transceanic world. If anything the new line-up to likely to stiffen United States foreign is likely to stiffen United States foreign policy, to lessen appeasement and to tighten up the East and West spheres of influence into which the present-day world is being drawn. Whether that will be a good thing or otherwise only time can show.

As to the effect of the election upon the Presidential test two years hence, the Republicans seem to have some cause for their buoyancy if not all that they claim. A good many first-line pleaders are back in elective posts, and they seem to have attracted a material proportion of public support at the polls. Two years, however, is a long time in this kind of a world, and much may happen to counter-balance such gains before 1952 rolls around.

Canada Has a Stake in the Pacific

N a world which knows few, if any, precedents for the unparalleled conditions of the times, the Dominion Government has given a lame set of reasons for Can-ada's failure to co-operate with New Zealand in keeping open the only regular pas-senger and cargo service between this coast Australasia under British registry. If the R.M.S. Aorangi goes off her run in January next, only the Ss. Lakemba, a nonscheduled freighter with some passenger accommodation, will be left; and the Lakemba is booked solid through to September, 1951.

Government circles state two reasons for refusal to act in concert with a sister Dominion to make available a limited subsidy or the continuation of the solitary Pacific service. One is that subsidies to vessels of "foreign" registry have no precedent; and the other is that the Canadian Pacific Air Lines is considered adequate for passenger travel. Neither reason will stand up to full inspection in the light of all the circumstances as they are known here in British

As for precedents, was there any precedent for Canada's recent loan of $300,000. 000 to a foreign nation in Europe, for the equipping of a Netherlands battalion with Canadian arms, for the Korean force, for one out of two of the things that are done and have to be done—in the light of to-day's hard facts? Strangely enough, a trans-Pacific steamship subsidy would belp Canada first and chiefly. This country would derive far more benefit from the continuation of the service than would either Australia or New Zealand. Also, with the Aorangi eliminated there will be nothing to take its place effectively. New Zealand is ready and willing to put up £10,000 a year for the next few years to keep the route open. It would not break Canada to make a proportionate gesture.

As for the second reason, since when has the general public been able to afford trans-

Sales Tax on Restaurant Meals Is Unfair

NCE again the Provincial Government is being asked to do away with the 3 per cent sales tax on restaurant meals or, alternatively, to raise the exemption from the present 50 cents to $1. It seems a pity that the British Columbia section of the Canadian Restaurant Association, which is making the request, has added that alternative, because it is on sound ground in seeking the total abolition of the tax on meals. It was a mistake to have written this impost into the act in the first place, and the Government should have had the good grace to eliminate it long ago. A tax on meals, wherever consumed and whatever the size of the check, is bad in principle for the reason that the statute itself declares food to be exempt. If the levy on meals costing more than 50 cents was intended to catch the well-to-do, as a sort of luxury tax, that is not the way it works. With very few exceptions, the millions of meals prepared over a year at lunch counters and restaurants are served to people who eat out as a matter of necessity and not by choice or as a luxury.

A city worker who orders the lunch counter's 65-cent special has to pay tax on it. Another who has time enough to go home for lunch may eat a bigger and better meal there, but pays not a penny of tax. It seems safe to say that most of those who crowd into restuarants at noon-time would much rather go home if they could, and it is manifestly unfair to tax them on their inability to do so. There is even more grievous discrimination against those who live rooming houses, with no facilities for the preparation of meals, and have no choice but to go out for them. The need for food is the same whether it is eaten downtown

I laid me down upon the shore And dreamed a lutle space: I heard the great waves break and roar The sun was in my face....

The grains of sand so shining-small Soft through my fingers ran; The sun shone down upon it all, And so my dream began

How all of this had been before; How ages far away I lay on some forgotten shore As here I lie today . . .

I have forgotten whence I came,

It is positively amazing to think that not long ago athletes believed stamina to be a virtue, and had a perverted pride in being able to finish any game they started—a stupid van-ity, you will admit. Poor fellows, they hadn't the wit to invent substitutes so that after a few moments' sweat and toll there would be a welcome rest at their disposal. As for bench warmers, that was beyond their imagination How these old-timers must writhe in envy as they note the self-assurance with which some of their successors can now sit at ease for a whole season and never take part in a game

The atom bomb, the greatly increased range of heavy bombers and advanced techniques of incendiary bombing have brought civil areas closer to the front line of combat. Destruction of industries, ports, and weakening of the will to fight by devastation of large population centres have become more and more important in the planning of military aggression.

Civil defence now ranks equal in importance with the army, navy and air forces. To neglect civil defence is to leave unprotected a nation's most vulnerable flank, leaving it wide open to drastic weakening of its over-all defence potential

The atomic bomb has led to much hysterical talk about the hope-lessness of trying to build an adequate civil defence force Britain, with her vast war experience, has taken a more common sense attitude It is based first on the premise that duly 23 areas in Britain are liable to atomic attack because of the cost of atom bombs and it is expected that these would have priority only after several United States targets. Seconly, Brit-ish studies of Hiroshima and Nagasak lead to the conclusion that much can be done to lessen the casualties from atomic bombing. It has been estimated, for example, that the Anderson shelter or structures considerably more primitive, are adequate protection against the atom bomb when covered with three feet of earth.

The possibility of an atomic bomb eing dropped on Victoria is remote but that does not in any way reduce the importance of protection against plosives with incendiaries. A fire raid Disaster knows no artificial boundarles. Greater Victoria is one civil defence unit. Various areas must cooperate to pool municipal services under a single air-raid control.

The logical starting point is a civil defence committee headed by the Mayor of Victoria and with representatives of the surrounding municipalities. This committee should co-operate volunteers to set up a defence plan. It will be required also to make legal provision for the inter-municipal use of police, fire, health and other services which are an integral part of any defence force. It must ensure that defence districts conform to proper civil defence principles rather than municipal boundaries.

The civil defence organization committee should assess available ma-terial and personnel in relation to needs and be prepared to advise senior governments what is required.

The Packsack By GREGORY CLARK

If you had a great big heavy box to deliver — a box full of canned goods, say - you would certainly do what the truck drivers do. You would manoeuvre your car as close to the place you had to deliver it as possible.

The delivery of goods is becoming one of the desperate factors in the downtown traffic problem of cities everywhere. In some communities, they are threatening darkly to pass by-laws obliging merchants and wholesalers to do their downtown delivery after business hours, between 8 p.m. and 8 a.m. But the question arises: What is business? Business is the movement of goods from one place to another. Nothing so infurlates a gentleman or a lady en route by car through downtown city streets as to have to walt one, two and even three min-utes (a perfectly outrageous length of time) while some truck driver balls up traffic with his manoeuvres to find a parking spot, or even—a situation pretty close to murder—double parks while he dashes into a store with a couple of packages.

Yet those of us who get reddest in the face with indignation at the behavior of truck drivers would no more dream of parking half a block down the street or around the corner on a side street if we had so much as a four-pound parcel to carry than we would dream of putting ourselves, for a couple of minutes, in the place of a truck driver with a 50 or 75-pound package to deliver. Nobody any more in our world wants to carry burdens. The truck driver does not want to carry a 50-pound carton one foot farther than he has . He belongs, with all the rest of us to this age of comfort. Never a day goes by but that some new device is created to ease the human burden. The trouble comes from the fact that our cities were laid out in the days when there was a large and hope-
